Dear Tom:

By all means go ahead and use the Camus article in the CW Reader. Glad to hear that the book is still in the works. I had been wondering what happened to it.

I may eventually use this material with some rewriting in a book. Probably the best thing would be to copyright it -- no wait a minute: it is already copyrighted for the CW isn't it? ~~Then~~ So leave it at that. Anyway I will do a certain amount of rewriting on it before it goes into my book on Camus.

I was glad to hear about the memorial service for AJ and your reminiscences of him too. It was wonderful that he could come down here and that I had a chance to meet him and be with him and all of you for those few days. A great and humble and impressive person, and I am glad there is some small recognition of the fact. The Times obituary was posted on the community notice board by one of the secretaries, and people were praying for AJ. I said Mass for him of course. We felt quite close to him, and to all of you, at that time. I see people around reading his biography too.

A couple of weeks ago they operated on my elbow and I guess it is better, though it is a bit uncomfortable. But really my health is quite good and I can be thankful for it. The woods have been great in the last few days, warm, real spring. Hope you are all well and I keep you all in my prayers. Pray for me too. At times the results of the enclosing and narrowing on the people here get to be a little uncomfortable: like now I can't get secretarial help any more because my last available secretary is so pious that he thinks I am too wild and controversial to type for. I guess if I write anything for CPF I will have to send it up to Nyack and try to get someone to type it up there. I can also get a little help in Louisville.

God bless all of you, and best always, in Christ,
