

To my much-keloves forther Louis with high esteem and phiel admination gones huntle editor, P-1 4.7. Siz

ASIAN PHILOSOPHICAL
STUDIES,
NO. 3

MENCIUS: THE MAN AND HIS IDEAS

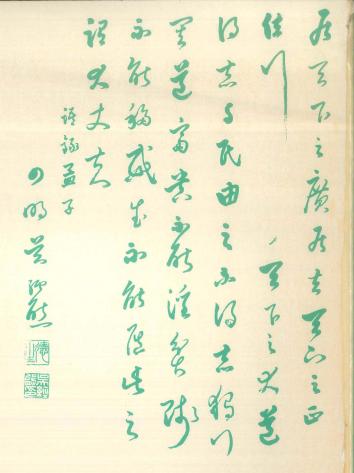

by

Albert Felix Verwilghen

Asian Philosophical Studies, No. 3
St. John's University Press
New York
1967

CONTENTS

Editor's Note	ix
Preface	X
An Introduction	xii
The Character of Mencius	1
Prejudice Against a Great Philosophical Tradition	9
The Pedagogical Arts of Master Meng	19
"The Bright Eyes and the Pure Heart of a Child"	33
Square and Compass or the Standard Measures for the Human Heart	48
"I Teach the Only and Unmistakable Way to Save China from Complete Collapse"	59
The Shaping of a New Knighthood: An Honest Officialdom for China	69
"There is Something That I Hate More Than Death"	82
Notes	95
Additional Notes	103
Bibliography	110
	Preface An Introduction The Character of Mencius Prejudice Against a Great Philosophical Tradition The Pedagogical Arts of Master Meng "The Bright Eyes and the Pure Heart of a Child" Square and Compass or the Standard Measures for the Human Heart "I Teach the Only and Unmistakable Way to Save China from Complete Collapse" The Shaping of a New Knighthood: An Honest Officialdom for China "There is Something That I Hate More Than Death" Notes Additional Notes

Calligraphy by John C. H. Wu

What Plato is to Socrates, Mencius is to Confucius. Mencius is molder of the Confucian thought much as Plato is interpreter of the Socratic doctrine. The gist of Confucianism can hardly be grasped without a study of Mencius' philosophy... Father Verwilghen's personal experience enriched by formal academic training has provided him with a solid foundation of Oriental scholarship.

In presenting this study, we hope that it will make a real contribution to a greater understanding of Chinese philosophy.

(Editor's Note)