Dear Eileen:

I will be glad to send a couple of pages on "Peace and Revolution" when I can. At the moment things are rather crowded, but at the beginning of July I hope to go into greater retreat and hope I will have some appropriate ideas. I think the sheer quantity in which we are always submerged constitutes a kind of violence!

The "Hangman's Beautiful Daughter" does indeed sound like something I'd like very much to hear. I'd be most happy to borrow it from you. Records can now reach me safely (they used to be intercepted, lost whatnot.) I look forward to hearing it.

You probably haven't seen the little poetry magazine I've been putting out. A copy goes to you under separate cover.

With all my best regards, in the Lord,
